Balkan War had shifted to London before the last issue of the The War Waits Missionary Herald. It is still there. The peace conferences have been broken off; but the delegates of the several states linger. waiting to see what may turn up, and incidentally keeping their eyes on the representatives of the Great Powers, also conferring, and who, it is felt, may play the part of "big brother" in settling the disputes. Curiously it seems to be to the interest of both sides to delay. If Adrianople shall be starved out and surrender, the Turkish government will be relieved of the odium of ceding that historic city as one of the terms of peace, while the Balkan Allies will have that stone of huge difficulty removed from the path of negotiations. The other rock on which the deliberations split is the disposition of the Ægean Islands, Greece demanding them and Turkey asserting

THE center of concern in the Turko-tria, and Italy siding with Turkey.

All in all, if the allies hold together—and they have shown unexpected tenacity in their alliance so far—it seems that Turkey must yield, slowly, with utmost resistance, but surely. With her army blocked from the relief of Adrianople, shut in behind the Chatalja lines while the troops of the allies are refreshed and re-enforced to renew the attack, with finances in desperate shape, and with her non-Moslem peoples indifferent or hostile as to the conduct of the war, she can only postpone the evil that they are essential to her holding the Dardanelles. Here, it is said, the Great Powers are divided, Great Britain, France, and Russia favoring their possession by Greece: Germany, Aus-

day of surrender. The Foreign Department of this number contains several telling stories of the activities of the missionaries in the war region.

A STRIKING incident is related in a private letter from Constantinople, written while the BulgaE Pluribus Unum rian cannon were booming around the walls of the city: -

"The girls of Gedik Pasha School of various races, Turk, Armenian, Greek, and others, meet to sew for the wounded soldiers, and as they sew they chat together harmoniously and sing the songs they had learned in the school. It is curious to see Greek, Armenian, and Turkish girls sewing for soldiers who are fighting Greece and hear them singing, 'Star-Spangled Banner.'"

THE opium question is acute in China now. England claims that China has violated the agreement of China's Fight 1911, which provided for a against Opium diminishing import for a period of seven years, by systematically obstructing the foreign trade, so that enormous unsalable stocks have been piled up at Shanghai; the value of opium so stored amounts to over £10,-000,000, which, mortgaged to eleven foreign banks, imperils their safety. It is admitted that China has sincerely intended to suppress the domestic cultivation of the poppy, but it is charged that in several provinces the edicts have been disregarded, and that the weakness of the government has allowed the sowing of the forbidden crop. The British minister has now warned the Chinese government (so says the Peking correspondent of the London Times) that unless unequivocal assurances are immediately forthcoming that it is the intention of China to observe the agreement, he will be compelled to advise his government that remonstrances are ineffective. Meanwhile the agitation of the anti-opium cause grows more vigorous in China. A meeting held in Peking in November last petitioned the government for more active measures to carry out the law passed for extirpating the evil, root and branch, at the end of the year 1912, and the government is certainly taking drastic action to accomplish the gigantic task.

Miss Luella Miner reports that the best speech at the meeting was by a representative of the governor of Anhui province, who was responsible for the burning of many cases of opium and the consequent sending of a British gunboat up the Yangtze River. He asserted that opium which China had already paid for she was free to destroy. Miss Miner is reminded of the famous Boston Tea Party. The ethics of the case are evidently involved. One cannot but sympathize with China's eagerness to make short work of stamping out the curse on her national life: it seems too bad that England, for the sake of her Indian opium merchants and her Shanghai bankers, must insist on delay and on promoting the traffic.

THE Missionary Herald has just received word of the death of one of its subscribers, a lady of Within a Lifetime Connecticut, aged 103 years and two months. Her birth thus antedated by a year that of the American Board. It is impressive to think that the vast and manifold work of modern foreign missions has been developed within a single lifetime.

IT will be good news to many missionary parents, and to boys and girls not a few, that the Walker Home Missionary for Missionary Children at Home Auburndale, Mass., destroyed by fire, is now to be rebuilt. Contracts have just been signed for a substantial fireproof brick building with slate roof. two and one-half stories high, with accommodations for thirty-five persons. The cost of the building, with furnishings, will be not far from $50,000, of which $37,000 is already in hand or pledged. A competent building committee has been drawn from the Prudential Committee, consisting of H. A.

Wilder, H. H. Proctor, and Rev. G. A. Hall, with Frank H. Wiggin as treasurer. Work goes forward at once, and it is hoped the building will be ready for use in the autumn.

THE arts and graces of oratory are not all Occidental: the men of the East know how to put things too. A Tactful At a welcome meeting ar-Welcome ranged by the church at Sholapur in the Marathi Mission for Rev. Richard S. Rose, newly arrived, the pastor of the church, holding in his hand a rosebush with blossoms, which he had searched to find, brought up historical allusions which he showed went to prove that Mr. Rose belonged to that mission; Gulab, which means "rose," is a familiar name within its borders. The Rajputs, among whom the name is chiefly known, are most patriotic warriors, even giving their lives for their country; so this new gulab, he felt sure, would be willing to give his life for his adopted country. No wonder Mr. Rose was much touched by the affection shown him as a newcomer.

THE American Board counts itself fortunate in securing for its South Africa Mission two tried Ireland, England, Africa, and missionaries, already on the ground and at work. Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Onslow-Carleton. who, by temporary engagement, have for a year and a half supervised the South Coast churches of the Zulu Branch from the station at Ifafa, have now been appointed missionaries of the Board. Their history is full of interest. Mr. Carleton was born in Belfast, Ireland, where his grandfather was mill owner in the Irish linen industry; his father instead of succeeding to the business joined the Salvation Army, and became its legal and financial adviser. The son, after a varied educational and business training, went out to Zululand to the Salvation Army training home, only to be recalled at length to London for study for further promotion. In 1899 he was married to Miss Geraldine Onslow, daughter of a member of Parliament for Guildford. but who at large personal sacrifice had joined the Salvation Army, in which she was an officer. Together they saw service in the Army in Zululand, and at length under the London Missionary Society at one of its stations. They come now with hearty sympathy and enthusiasm into the circle of the American Board's staff in South Africa. among whom they have already approved themselves as devoted and skillful laborers.

THERE sailed from Boston on the afternoon of the last day of 1912 Dr. and Mrs. Floyd O. Smith, bound From Iowa for the Eastern Turkev Misto Diarbekir sion to undertake the medical work in the far city of Diarbekir. succeeding Dr. and Mrs. Edwin St. John Ward, who have gone to Beirut. Funds for building and endowing a hospital at Diarbekir were provided by a large legacy from a wealthy Armenian, a native of the city, who had emigrated thence to America and died in New York. Dr. Smith was born at Rowley, Ia.; was educated at the Winthrop, Ia., high school (1901); Lenox College Academy, Hopkinton, Ia. (1902-03), and Lenox College (B.S. 1907); studied medicine at Iowa State University Medical School, graduating within three or four of the head of his class; served one year as interne at the Iowa Methodist Hospital, Des Moines. Dr. Smith has also had a varied business experience, and has engaged in Christian work as leader in college Young Men's Christian Association, teacher of Bible classes, superintendent of a mission Sunday school, and director of a vacation evangelistic team. He has been a Student Volunteer for the last three years.

Mrs. Smith (Bessie Heath) was born in Manchester, Ia., where she was educated at the public schools, and was graduated from Lenox College in 1910. She has had experiences as a teacher, and has been active in the usual lines of church work and as president of the college Young Women's Christian Association.

MR. AND MRS. WOLFE

The departure of Mrs. Wolfe from San Francisco to the Shansi Mission, recorded in The Chronicle of this month, gives occasion to present the pictures and life sketches of two new missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse B. Wolfe, appointed missionaries of the Board last spring while they were in China.

Mr. Wolfe was born in Springfield, Ill. His parents were both of German descent, and were at one time missionaries under the United Brethren Church in Sierra Leone, West Africa. The son's early home life was spent in the growing towns of the West and on a farm. He was graduated in 1898 from Madison High School, Ohio, studied one year at Oberlin, was graduated in 1905 from Oberlin College, and took a year in Oberlin Seminary; not feeling qualified for the ministry, and with an increasing taste for mechanics, he left the seminary to study at Armour Institute, afterward taking a correspondence course in mechanical engineering. He has had a varied business life, both in farming and practical engineering, has engaged in both religious and social settlement work, and has had musical experience. with amateur orchestras and bands. He became a Student Volunteer in his junior year in college, with strong preference for China, to which country he came in 1909, and where he has served as government school-teacher at Paotingfu and in the Peking University (Methodist).

Mrs. Wolfe was born in Oberlin, O., where she lived until the time of her marriage in 1909, studying at its schools and graduating from Oberlin College in 1906. She has had experience as teacher in Michigan and in the Oberlin High School, and has engaged in church work in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society in the First Congregational church at Oberlin, of which she is a member.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe were appointed missionaries of the Board and designated to the Shansi Mission, with the expectation that they would take up educational work in place of Mr. and Mrs. Staub, who had withdrawn from Taiku.

THE missionary spirit finds outlet wherever it is. Rev. J. T. Tucker, on his way to the West Africa Mission, went to Lisbon for language study in Portuguese. Thence he writes of a tour of evangelization he has made in the provinces, finding the spiritual condition of the people saddening in the extreme, yet a notable readiness to listen to the gospel everywhere. Already he had given several brief addresses in Portuguese.

A happy surprise followed a formal call on the Colonial Secretary at Lisbon, in which Mr. Tucker and his party were most cordially received and real interest shown in their plans for West Africa; the morning papers of the next day contained among the Colonial Affairs a report of the call, a brief account of the industrial features of the Angola Mission, and the announcement that the Minister of the Colonies authorized the establishment of the Mission in any part of the interior of Western Africa. This public and official recognition in the capital of Portugal of the American Board's work in its West African possessions is most gratifying.

Advices from Peking indicate great indignation throughout China over Russia's aggression in outer Mongolia. Commenting on the treaties, one of them secret, signed last November, which make that part of Mongolia practically a dependency of Russia, Miss Luella Miner scores a point sharply:—

"The republic of China cannot be recognized, but fragments of a dependency of China, headed by a 'Living Buddha' and a few gold-bought chiefs, with no sources of revenue except money borrowed from Russia, and dependent on the same Power for military equipment, is honored by a visit from a high ambassador, formerly minister to Peking and introduced by him as a full-fledged nation. Such is International Lawlessness. Perhaps 'the heathen in his blindness' may be forgiven for not always understanding the ethics of so-called Christian nations."

It seems that Dare to Die bands are being formed in China; telegrams from most of the provinces counsel war measures. President Yuan and the cabinet are so pressed they have hardly time to eat or sleep, and the anti-Russian sentiment is growing intense. Perhaps Russia is unwittingly doing good in that she is uniting all parties in China and binding the republic together yet more firmly with a patriotic and national spirit.

IRRESISTIBLY the churches of Christ in America are being drawn together; the religious situation at home and abroad compels it. Council at The note of co-operation is being struck too widely and repeatedly to be silenced or disregarded. It is not in one quarter alone or by one event that the movement is to be recognized. The impressive fact is that from all directions and in many forms the call to get together is being heard. All of which adds significance to the recent quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, at Chicago, when 300 and more delegates, representing twenty-eight communions, deliberated on the varied lines of thought and service along which these Christian bodies can combine forces. Started somewhat doubtfully, pushed for a long time with some difficulty, it seems that this organization has now a clear and commanding field to occupy: to gather up and express for American Protestant Christianity these separate appeals and challenges for a united attack on the common foe, and to open out methods and forms by which concerted action can make felt the latent power of a national Christianity. From the foreign lands where the movement is already far advanced, and where the gain of it is evident, the call comes to the American churches with redoubled power: "Get together!"

The Missionary Review of the World lays all students of missions under obligation by its tabulation, in its issue for January, of the Statistics of the Protestant Foreign Missionary Societies of the World for 1912. It is an impressive array of figures covering both sides of a huge sheet, and furnishes abundant material for study and comparison. More elaborate than the tables of the American Board Almanac, these lists emphasize by so much the more the spread and strength of this world enterprise, whose annual income is over $38,000,000, and whose total number of communicants and adherents is over 6,000,000.

NOTWITHSTANDING the Scripture injunction to "beware when all men speak well of you," it is a satisfaction to find the mis-Themselves Being Judges sionaries of the American Board commended even by those who might be thought their opponents, who certainly are not their adherents. So in connection with Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Eaton's withdrawal from Mexico because of Dr. Eaton's ill health, it is a pleasure to find the editor of the Chihuahua Enterprise, himself a Roman Catholic, introducing into his columns a communication from Dr. Eaton with a graceful tribute, in the course of which he says:—

"The people of this city, and more especially the parishioners of Trinity Church, will regret the retirement and departure of Dr. Eaton from this city; but wherever God's missionaries go the world is benefited, and Chihuahua's loss in Dr. Eaton is another's gain."

THERE comes to hand the ninetieth annual report of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association. The very name of it is impressive, and Heritage its contents deepen the impression. Its cover bears the motto, That they might have life," and every page of the substantial pamphlet suggests life in abundance. First of all its copious illustrations is a striking picture of Rev. Orramel H. Gulick, superintendent emeritus, standing alert on a solid rock pedestal, as if claiming the land. The tables and statistics that follow of work among Hawaiians, Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, and whatever other race may there be found, the narratives of the different fields of endeavor, the pictures of strong racial leaders, of trim, attractive churches, of overflowing schools, all suggest prosperous, vigorous, Christian life. Clearly the old missionary leaven is working yet in that composite mass of humankind known as the United States Territory of Hawaii. Greetings and good wishes for the ninety-first year's work!

The officers and executive committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement have issued a request to That the the missionary boards and so-Men Pray cieties to set afresh before the Christian men of North America the fundamental need of a new life of prayer in connection with the work of missions. Recognizing that the work on the fields is moving forward with widening success, that missionary interest at home has become more intelligent and sympathetic, that the nations of the world are being stirred of God as never before in our time, and that there is now a remarkable opening of mind and heart toward the gospel, it is yet felt that something more than is being attained is necessary to meet the emergency and that the greatest need of the present hour is not organization or education or agitation, but prayer and the depth of life in God. To this end the Laymen's Movement urges a combined appeal to the men of all communions to draw near to God in the devotion of a richer love and a fuller faith and in the actual practice of believing and persistent prayer. We gladly second the call.

In connection with its convention, to be held at Zurich next July, the World's Sunday School Associa-A Sunday School tion is arranging an Ori-Oriental Tour ental tour for a party of fifteen Sunday school leaders, three of whom represent the Congregational churches and the American Board. Their itinerary calls for leaving San Francisco March 1, spending over a month in Japan, a fortnight in Korea, and three weeks in China; thence by Trans-Siberian Railroad to Moscow. They will have time for a good look at missionary and Sunday school work in the Far East. We wish them bon voyage.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE SLAV

BY DEAN GEORGE E. WHITE, OF ANATOLIA COLLEGE, MARSOVAN, TURKEY

THE London Spectator, which is said to be the one paper read by all the diplomats of Europe, has consistently urged that the future of European international politics will largely be determined by the action of the Southern Slavs. If one looks at the ethnographical map, he will easily see that the great bulk of the Slavic people in Russia and its dependencies are separated by Austria, Hungary, and Roumania from another Slavic group lying further to the south. These are Bulgarians, Servians, and the Slavs of Macedonia, Montenegro, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Croatia, and fringes of Austria and Hungary.

The Southern Slavs have thus been broken into fragments politically, ruled, and rather ruthlessly ruled for the most part, by people foreign to themselves. The present war witnesses a large part of these Southern Slavs standing for the first time shoulder to shoulder. They number in all probably 15,000,000. The Bulgarians, who are a race originally related to the Turks, stand most nearly by themselves. All the others are Serbs, or closely related with the Serbian peoples. If they could all unite, or if the thrill of brotherhood which now pulsates among them could bring them all to a community of feeling and interest, their future might be one of great importance on the chessboard of the international game. Most of them were for many generations ruthlessly crushed under the Turkish heel. Still they are scattered in national allegiance, Austria being the one great Power which they fear, Russia the one great Power to which they look with longing eyes for sympathy. The day may be at hand when the Southern Slavs are coming to their own.

Practically none from these regions reach Anatolia College as students, but within the last few years we have been surprised at the arrival of Slavs from the Caucasus provinces, the Russian littoral of the Black Sea, and the coasts of the Sea of Azov. It is not so very long since Russia took in hand the process of conquering and assimilating the magnificent mountainous region between the Black and Caspian Seas. Many of the peoples are kindred in blood with the peoples in Asia Minor.

So Armenians, Greeks, Georgians, Jews, Germans, Russians, one after another, have crossed the Black Sea and sought the education offered by one of the colleges located in Turkey connected with the American Board. As many as twoscore in number, they form a considerable group among our students. In general they are young men with big bodies, blue eyes, tight jackets, and belts with brass buckles, presenting an appearance as far as possible removed from that of the characteristic Oriental. with his flowing robes and relaxed muscles. One might think that Russians would be difficult students to control, but this is not the case. When the teacher and the student face each other, none, perhaps, is more respectful and amenable to authority than the characteristic Slav. Some of Russian citizenship are Jews, and a smile plays over the features as they tell how they could not secure access to Russian universities because of their blood. Others smile similarly as they describe a rebellion among the students of some institution in Russia where they had been, when the students were scattered by mounted Cossacks, who rode in among them and disciplined them with their horsewhips. Their eyes seem to suggest dreamy ideals and the ability to endure anything for them if necessary. They all speak with the utmost respect of Tolstoi and of the influence which he produced among the common people, which, with or without a revolution, will certainly introduce an era of more liberty and more manliness as the years go by.

It is not so long ago that I enjoyed a coveted opportunity of visiting Russian soil, landing at Batoum at the eastern end of the Black Sea. Batoum was Turkish territory up to the War of 1877. Now it is transformed into a flourishing and adorned provincial metropolis, with its railroads, its beautiful gardens, its substantial buildings, its picturesque streets, its tea plantations and orange groves. Acquaintance with former students opened the hospitable doors. The process of Russification goes steadily forward among the inhabitants whose ancestors represented almost all nationalities save the Russian. The blood, even the air, of Russia draws and assimilates.

I thought I found the key of Russian character, concerning which I had often wondered before. It is essentially boyish, almost childish. Russia is the youth among the European nations. In the time of Peter the Great it was like a big, awkward boy, too bashful to enter the society of the other European Powers. Peter laid hold of the Russian coat collar and yanked the bashful youth forward to take his place among the gentlemen of Europe. The Russians are warm-hearted, enthusiastic, loving, and lovable. They are also unrestrained, uncontrolled, impetuous. I remarked to an American friend that I believed in the future of the Russians. He answered, "I believe in the future of the Russians, but I am afraid of it, because there is so much power and it is controlled neither from without nor from within."

The heartless cruelty, the cynical faithlessness, the absolute despotism, that have seemed to mark the Russian bureaucracy in their dealing with other Powers or with their own people are enough to appall one. But surely if it is ever right to distinguish between individuals and their institutions, that distinction should be drawn here. Apparently Russia has a long road to travel before it will reach the position that its best friends desire for it. But after all, governments and institutions are made by people, and it is impossible for one to become acquainted with the people of Russia without believing that they must have a great future.

A service in a Russian church stands out vividly in memory. One, for example, was held in the early morning, and the audience was largely composed of men. The room was light and cheery, adorned with many pictures and candles. The worshipers made the sign of the cross innumerable times, the motions being up, down, right, left. The archimandrite with flowing hair, sandy beard, and wholesome face, who conducted the service, would furnish a good model for the picture of the Christ. Most of the service was chanted by the choir, and such singing! It was led without instrument by priests, whose voices would command attention anywhere.

Unlike most of the Eastern Church services, this one seemed really helpful to the people; but then the language was modern Russian, understood by all. One could not help feeling, however, that the influence of the service was in danger of being left at the church doors, judging by what one sees and knows of actual moral conditions in Russia.

Yet a church that promotes, and a government that encourages, the free circulation of the Scriptures in the language of the common people are not to be lightly esteemed. And indeed as soon as one sets foot on the soil whose symbol is the double-headed eagle, he feels that there is a real evangelical leaven at work among the people. There are many German Lutherans in the country. There are Baptist missionaries and congregations. There are Molocans and Stundists. There are Young Men's Christian Associations. and there is a degree of evangelical light and power that, by the grace of God, must grow and increase.

THE NEW HOSPITAL AT ANATOLIA COLLEGE, MARSOVAN

A KURDISH BABY

BY MISS MARY D. ULINE, OF BITLIS, EASTERN TURKEY

M OOSA'S baby girl was very sick. He told me about her as we came down from our mountain camp one bright October morning. Since school began I have been going back and forth from the city in order to sleep where the air is fresh and the nights still. Moosa, a Kurdish kavass (guard), had often accompanied me.

The sunshine was so glorious that day that I felt unusually happy. Everything was so beautiful that it seemed to me no one should be sad. I told Moosa to look at a lovely mountain in the distance covered by a thin veil of mist. Places in the city where the blue smoke was curling upwards from the houses, nestled in the thick growth of green, were pointed out to him. His attention was called to the vineyards newly planted on the mountain sides, but nothing seemed to interest him. "My little girl is very sick." was the principal thing he said.

When we reached the city I told him I would come to see the child as soon as possible. His attitude towards a baby girl was extraordinary. In the Orient no native cares much whether girls live or not, and when there is a large family of girls the father considers himself greatly afflicted and wonders what sin he has committed to be so punished.

That day was a very busy one, and I was not able to go to Moosa's house until after sunset. Krekor, another kavass, went with me. A ragged child came running out of an alley with the news that the little girl had just died.

We walked up a few stone steps into a narrow court, and there, outside the one-roomed house, some women were throwing water over the little body. The child was as white as any American baby, and just as pretty. She smiled so sweetly I could hardly believe she was dead. I longed to lay her out properly and put a dainty white dress on her, but such a thing would have been unheard of here, and too sudden a departure from custom to have attempted it. Instead, the body was rolled up tightly in coarse cloth, tied to a narrow board, and covered with a dark shawl.

As Mazzes (her name) was a little Kurdish baby, a Mohammedan Mollah was called. He stood by her body, which had been placed on the ground, stretched out his arms over her, and chanted a few prayers to Allah, whose will it had been to cause the child's death.

All the women went into the house when the Mollah came, but I stayed outside with Moosa, Krekor, and the other men. Then I went in to see the little wife, a mere child of fifteen or sixteen, who had been married eight years. Among the Kurds infants are often betrothed and children are married. After sitting on the floor a few minutes, I went out into the court again.

Not twenty minutes had passed since the child died, but everything was over, and they were ready to bury her. The Mollah picked up the little corpse and carried it a short distance. Moosa, Krekor, Moosa's father, a kind old Kurd, and I, followed. The child was being taken to the cemetery, or rather, the hill of bones and tumble-down stones they call a cemetery in Turkey.

A KURDISH MOTHER AND BABY

In a few minutes we reached a little market where we met three men with spades. They walked ahead of our little procession. The Mollah handed the little dead baby to Moosa, and he carried her, his own child, the remainder of the way. It was dark. The lights of the city, in celebration of the Sultan's birthday, made the dreary spot where they were to dig the grave seem darker in contrast.

It was all so pathetic a scene—so different from the way in which we bury children in America and in other civilized countries. There was not a blossom, not even a bud or a bit of green for Mazzes, the little Mohammedan baby, and a coffin in this impoverished land would have been an undreamed-of luxury.

A LOYAL SERVANT OF INDIA

Letters from India have brought the shocking news of the sudden death at Poona, November 21, of Rev. Henry G. Bissell, of Ahmednagar in the Marathi Mission. It was known that Mr. Bissell was in ill health; for two months the heart action had been wrong; he had been sadly depressed in spirits and confined for much of the time to his bed. The Prudential Committee, on physician's recommendation, had authorized a furlough in this country before the next hot season.

The loss that has thus befallen India is heavy indeed; the mission, his colleagues, his native brethren, the Theological Seminary of which he was a professor, the churches and the communities he served untiringly, are all sorely bereaved. For Mr. Bissell was exceptionally qualified for his task. A son of the land, associated with its people through childhood, speaking the Marathi tongue even better than the Indians themselves—it is said that Brahmans would go to hear him for very joy at listening to his use of the idioms and shadings of their speech loving the people, at home with their characteristic ways of life, sympathizing with their every good quality and impulse, he was able to identify himself to a remarkable degree with those to whom he would minister.

<sup>1</sup> Henry Gaston Bissell, son of Rev. Lemuel and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Beaumont) Bissell, of the Marathi Mission; born Milan, O., December 3, 1864; studied at Barre (Mass.) High School, Olivet College (1889), and Hartford Theological Seminary (1892); inarried, August 13, 1891, Miss Alice Theo King, of Breckenridge, Mich.; appointed missionary of the American Board to the Marathi Mission February 23, 1892, and sailed September 24, 1892; on furlough in America in 1895-96 and 1906-07; died at Poona November 21, 1912. Two sisters, Misses Emily R. and Julia, and one brother, Arthur D., have been members of the same mission, Miss Emily R. being now on furlough in this country.

Dr. R. A. Hume, writing for the Dnyanodaya, draws a striking picture of the man at his task:—

"The lines of missionary work in which Mr. Bissell excelled were evangelistic work, the planning and conducting of conferences and campaigns of various kinds, and especially leading in musical services of an Indian type. He was a good singer and very good in singing Indian music. In national fashion, seated with his legs crossed under him, with Indian clappers in both hands, surrounded by a company of singers and musicians, he would sway his body, interject ejaculations and gospel appeals, and thus for hours would keep an audience marvelously stirred, while listening to his bhajans in the characteristic style of this country."

His service to the foreign missionary cause in this land was hardly less conspicuous. A natural orator, full of his subject, aglow with the passion of his own missionary fire, he fairly electrified the audiences who listened to his appeals. During his last furlough in the United States he was in great demand, and gave himself unstintedly, East and West, in public address and by private interview, to the cultivation of the missionary spirit, especially in behalf of his beloved India, whose needs were ever upon his heart.

A spirit so sensitive, intense, and responsive to shifts of situation and opportunity could not but suffer exhaustion and wear hard the rather slender body in which it dwelt. After twenty years of rich and rewarding service, the earthly limit was reached; the end came in India, where the tired body lies at rest; the spirit returned to God who gave it.

To Mrs. Bissell, coming now to this country with the three small children, and to the oldest daughter at Oberlin, the sympathy of a multitude of hearts goes out; likewise to Mr. Bissell's brothers and sisters, to the mission and to other missions by whom, as Mr. Alden Clark points out, Mr. Bissell was specially prized, and to the Marathi people, all left lonelier and needier for the departure of this ideal friend and helper. It will be impossible to fill his place.

DRIVING OUT A MISSIONARY

"Erickson given ten days to quit Elbasan. Embassy advised.

(Signed) AMERICAN CONSUL."

THIS dispatch from Salonica, received at the Board Rooms the day before Christmas, brings to that date a story of trial and hardship almost unmatched in the records of the American Board. It follows closely a letter from Mr. Erickson, written in prison in Durazzo, which, if his plan availed, he slipped past the guard by the boy who brought him his meals, so that it caught a steamer just sailing. The letter reported that he had got so far on his way home (to Elbasan) from the sad journey described in last month's Missionary Herald. In that journey he had brought out his sick boy to Lausanne, where the delayed operation proved fatal, leaving him free to hurry back to Mrs. Erickson and the three small children, of whose welfare in that stormy land he had heard nothing for eight weeks.

Reaching Durazzo, he was arrested on suspicion (of what he could not learn) and put under guard, being allowed to talk to no one nor to communicate with his wife. The three days of imprisonment, till the letter was written, had been spent in vain interviews with officers looking toward some settlement of the case. It appeared that no mail went farther than Durazzo: letters to Mr. Erickson, and even his letters to his wife, were simply piled up at that port. The letter closed with these brave words: "Don't worry about me. It's all in the day's work and must end sooner or later. They have nothing to hold me on here."

Apparently they had not. The later cable would indicate that he was released and reached home at length only to be ordered away from Elbasan, thus fulfilling the Durazzo officer's word that he would not be allowed to live in the land at the present time, that the country was so unsettled no missionary work could be done or would be allowed.

It has had a disturbed and dramatic career, this Albanian Mission of the American Board, from its start five vears ago. It began with the sudden appearance of a live Albanian bey at the Board Rooms, who asked for the Secretary, and announced that he had come to get teachers for his people. When told that this Board only sent missionary teachers who carried the Christian message, he declared that he so understood; it would make no difference; his people, so far as they were Mohammedans, were only nominally so; they wanted the learning of the West, and would take the risk of its Christianity.

Secretary Barton chanced to tell the story of this strange visitor at a missionary convention; it impressed one of his hearers, a woman of wealth, with the result that she and another friend gave $25,000, to be spread over a five years' term in the founding of new work among the Albanians. Two married missionaries, Rev. P. B. Kennedy and Rev. C. T. Erickson, were found to undertake the pioneering, and were located at two important centers, the former at Kortcha, the latter at Elbasan. Mr. Erickson, indeed, was first placed at Tirana, but was driven out from there by the persecution of the Young Turk Party and re-established at Elbasan. Here he has held on sturdily, once being arrested and transported to Monastir, whence after wearying delay and negotiations he was allowed to return. His efforts toward permanent establishment, the securing of a mission compound, building of residence, school, etc., have been blocked by the Turkish government, which claimed the purchased land for public uses, only after long and patient pressure allowing another location instead.

Forced to live in a native dwelling, obstructed at every point of advance, living in the midst of disorder, plottings, and wild alarms, this missionary family has stuck to its post, hoping for better days and a fairer chance. That such hope was not unwarranted appeared when on a recent visit to Tirana, whence they were driven out, Mr. Erickson was received by the head men with profound cordiality; they welcomed him to the town, urged his return to settle there, and loaded him with demonstrations of regard.

It seems impossible that an enterprise so valiantly begun, into which life and treasure have been poured, and which has for its aim the blessing of that hardy Albanian people, 2,000,000 strong—a brave, patriotic, and eager race of men—should come to defeat by an order to be gone. God grant that better counsels may prevail, and that the settlement of the Balkan troubles may leave Albania open to the Christmas tidings!

ASTRONOMY AND CHRISTIANITY IN CEYLON

ALLEN ABRAHAM, for twenty-one years professor of astronomy in Jaffna College, Ceylon, has recently been elected a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society of England, the first native Ceylonese to receive that honor. The occasion prompts the Jaffna College Miscellany to recount the astronomical fame of the old Batticotta Seminary, out of which the college grew.

Established in 1823 by American

Board missionaries, it began with great difficulty to establish scientific truth in a country where the sacred books gave opposing accounts. The telescope was a help in astronomy; the witness of their own eyes dispelled the pupils' lingering doubts. In 1830 an eclipse of the moon projected a memorable discussion between the principal of the seminary and a famous native astronomer, Visvanantha Sastry by name. An almanac, published by this learned

ALL-CEYLON STUDENT CAMP AT NEGOMBO, AUGUST, 1912 Over fifty delegates in attendance; an inspiring and helpful occasion

Brahman, was found to contain three glaring errors in the calculation of the eclipse; his attention being called to the matter, he went over his work again, with the same result; others assisting him confirmed his reckoning. They took their stand by these figures, watching with evident pleasure the testing of the comparative correctness of the two calculations.

The attention of many in the district interested in the continuance of idolatry was aroused: it was doubted whether Europeans were able to calculate eclipses correctly without knowledge supposed to be gained from the Hindus by bribery. One learned man took pains to make the issue sharp and open that the decision might be clear, and arranged to be at the mission station as a witness at the time of the eclipse. It was recognized that not merely the truth of the traditional system of astronomy was at stake, but also one of the most popular arguments in support of the Hindu system of idolatry.

On the evening of the eclipse many assembled near the seminary to witness the result, when all, including the learned witness, had satisfactory ocular proof that the native calculation was wrong at the three specified points. It was a notable triumph for the seminary; the effect on different classes of persons was obvious. The ancient Hindu theory that two serpents, Rahvo and Kathu, periodically seized the sun and moon and then caused the eclipses was discredited by the accompanying lecture in the seminary chapel, showing by lamps and shadows what was transpiring in the heavens. The missionary teaching was vindicated; its opponents were silenced.

Throughout its history the seminary, and later its successor the college, have done splendid service in the liberalizing of thought and the establishment of a just and Christian knowledge in Jaffna. At length the present occupant of the astronomical chair, Professor Abraham, receives merited recognition of his contribution to the learning not only of Ceylon, but of the world. When Halley's comet was being studied in 1910, his prediction as to the time of its visibility, earlier than that of other astronomers, was proved true; moreover he noted, what many eminent scholars overlooked, that the entrance of the comet into the orbit of Venus would retard its motion and affect the calculation of the time of its crossing the sun's disc.

THE IMMORTAL LIVINGSTONE

By Associate Secretary D. BREWER EDDY

OME small men borrow momentary honor from the offices they hold. Other men, marked by power, reflect glory upon their task. Little Blantyre on the Clyde will be a remembered spot on March 19, because one such man will be glorified in the world's thought. Even from men who cannot rise to understand its motives, the missionary enterprise will win approval and honor, because long ago every man accepted Livingstone as the ranking missionary of modern times. He captured the popular imagination. He brought self-sacrifice and devotion to a great cause somewhat closer to the human heart.

Was there ever another missionary of the gospel whose mortal remains were borne in high honor by a Ship of the Line and under the protection of the national flag to a nation waiting in grief to lay them among poets, captains, and kings in its pantheon?

In rarest combination circumstance conspired with destiny to crown this hero. As we are numbering in mind the causes of the world's interest in his centenary, one little detail slips in before we dwell on larger themes. We will think of him in more personal terms, at least, because he knew and cherished the same traditions of Pilgrim and Puritan ancestry with us. He was a Congregationalist, sent out by our mother Board, the London Missionary Society. He is the only ordained Congregational minister that lies in the Abbey. This makes him no greater man, but it makes him dearer and nearer to us.

As Americans we claim a larger share in him than in other men of Europe, for our national pride was deeply touched when, after England had sought in vain to find him. Yankee persistence and energy pierced the impossible jungles and made possible that dramatic scene at Ujiji. where Stanley, backed by the Stars and Stripes, at last greeted the weary old man in the laconic phrase, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" No nation that has not known four years of awful war in behalf of the black man can thrill so deeply to the proud title, "Champion of the Slave." We know every weary mile of journey, every heartache and agony undergone in the self-same cause.

Livingstone has charmed the thought of boys and men because of the virility of his career. Men of courts and diplomacy are beyond our ken, but a man of camp fire and raft, of shoulder pack and stinted rations, wakes the old prairietilling, wilderness-breaking spirit of America's frontiersmen. Just as the romance of Marcus Whitman sings to us a hidden note, or the stories of Daniel Boone and of David Crockett bind us to the early struggles for our territory, so we love Livingstone as the great spiritual pioneer, whose diary in commonplace words out-thrills the dime novel of decadent times. We can find in him those same undercurrents that made possible the typical American novels, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Deerslayer." Wading rivers, escaping the barbs of poisoned arrows, shooting elephants to save a village from starvation, standing on great platforms before vast audiences with that stiffened left shoulder that testified to the crushing jaws of the lion, thrown into a rapid stream from a boat overturned by a wounded hippopotamus, hunted, attacked, and almost overcome by Arab slave traders—these things may not be as true marks of greatness. but at least they are more interesting to us than the appearing of this hero of Africa before his queen and his king or the unending honors of cities and universities.

We love these three simpler, nay, even lower-planed elements in his story, but there are three others that comprise a valid claim to remembrance.

Livingstone is the shining witness to the argument that missionaries spread commerce. In his work this motive reached the point of danger. Many misunderstood and distrusted him because he was so deeply interested in England's securing the trade routes to interior Africa. He knew that the surest aid to civilization was the trading caravan and store. He dared to plan his life in alliance with the forces of business and not in defiance of them. So long as it cannot be discovered that he ever whittled down a principle or compromised a motive by a hair's breadth in behalf of "business," we may agree that he made it serve his own high purposes and not the reverse. But the fact remains that every traveler on today's railways and trails of Africa may well recognize his work as Pathfinder and Scout of civilization.

To the scientific world his work has remained as a monument of patience and accuracy. His records needed no corrections. His insight and judgment as explorer and geographer were unusually keen and final, while the long list of discoveries standing to his credit places him among the greatest of contributors to the knowledge of the world. The lakes Ngami, Nyasa, Shirwa, Bangweolo, and Mweru, the Lualaba River. the upper course of the Congo, were but a few of his prizes. There were no honors or medals in the gift of the learned societies that were not due to him.

As empire builder, also, he has his place. That simple consul's cap with its strip of gold braid was the entering wedge for many a dream of England's power. He called her ships and her men to follow on his trail in behalf of justice and liberty. New districts for trade, new tribes for influence, new provinces for conquest, follow the logic of nations, but they must first be led by the one man. Cecil Rhodes could not have done his final work without having a Livingstone on ahead.

"Plotted sites of future cities, traced the easy grades between 'em;

Watched unharnessed rapids wasting fifty thousand head an hour;

Counted leagues of water frontage through the axe-ripe woods that screen 'em —

Saw the plant to feed a people—up and waiting for the power!

"God took care to hide that country till he judged his people ready,

Then he chose me for his Whisper, and I've found it, and it's yours!"

There yet remain the three greatest reasons for our admiration. Livingstone is one of history's true Reformers. He had been drawn into his life work by Moffat's story of "the smoke of a thousand villages" where no missionary had ever gone. A picture of other villages burning to ashes in the trail of the slaver was seared into his brain. His later years were spent in the attempt to brand that condemning vision on the conscience of England and America. The wail of the Manganja slave gang, the awful sights of the Zanzibar slave market, were intensified in that scene from the hilltop east of Ujiji, where he counted seventeen villages in flames following the massacre in the Nyangwe market. These are the background of his cry to the world, which gathers up more of his life and thought than any sentence penned by him, "All I can say in my loneliness is, may Heaven's rich blessing come down on every one - American, Englishman, Turk — who will help to heal this open sore of the world." The world heard at last, and all too slowly fulfilled his dying prayer.

On his tomb the three words stand, "Missionary, Traveller, Philanthropist." And the greatest of these is "Missionary." Here he gives us his heart. Silvester Horne writes: "He was a man of many interests, but a single aim. He was a citizen of many worlds, but only as a citizen of the kingdom of God. He told his scientific friends in England before his last great journeys that he could only 'feel the way of duty' if he went out as a missionary. The cap he wore might be the consul's cap, but the head under it was thinking out the strategy of a Christian campaign." His life cannot be measured in the numbers of converts or churches. but the heart of his work was the spread of the gospel of Christ, interpreted in the broadest terms of man's welfare. The breadth of his work did not subtract from its height or its depth. Not many men can imitate him as the ideal missionary in these days of intensive and specialized labor, but we cherish him as ideal in devotion and in the unceasing spiritual power of his missionary career.

After the story is told and the facts are stated there yet remains the man himself as the chief magnet of our affection. The sturdy qualities of the boy weaver with book outspread on his loom; the picture of David the young man reading the 121st Psalm ("the traveler's Psalm," read by the great Traveler) in the humble cottage on that last evening; the awful loneliness that cries to us from the pages of his journal, and against which only his sense of duty incomplete was strong enough to hold him to his task; and last of all that unparalleled scene at Ilala, where, as though his body were taking for eternity the mold of his undving spirit in surrender and in faith. he falls asleep while on his knees beside the rude cot, his spirit going on and on, forever pleading for the despoiled and helpless black man so well beloved - in these, as in every thought, deed, and word, we see Livingstone the Man of Christ. Character triumphs over work. as did spirit over weary flesh. And we who serve the same ideals and the same Master can only give thanks for a life so nearly like the model he followed.

"To lift the somber fringes of the night, To open lands long darkened to the light, To heal grim wounds, to give the blind new sight.

Right mightily wrought he.

"Like Him he served, he walked life's troublous ways

With heart undaunted, and with calm, high

And gemmed each day with deeds of sweetest grace,

Full lovingly wrought he.

"Like Him he served, he would not turn aside.

Nor home nor friends could his true heart divide:

He served his Master, and naught else beside,

Right faithfully wrought he.

"Forth to the fight he fared,
High things and great he dared,
In his Master's might to spread the light,
Right mightily wrought he.
He greatly loved—
He greatly lived—
And died right mightily."

HOME DEPARTMENT

AN EXCELLENT SHOWING FOR DECEMBER

WE are thankful for December. It was a most interesting month in the Board Rooms. Multitudes of churches all over the country sent in gifts in order to have them accredited on the year's apportionment. Early in the month these remittances arrived at the rate of about twenty-five a day. Toward the end of the month it had become a veritable flood, and the treasury clerks were working overtime. One banner day showed over two hundred separate remittances. Of these about half showed an increase, the others falling off somewhat. The last few days the situation reminded us of the way the California national election returns came in. First there was a gain, then a loss, then a gain. A week before the books for the month closed, gifts from churches and individuals showed a loss over 1911 of $4,194.87. During the next week this was changed to a gain in these items of $2,608.45. The tabulation below is full of encouragement, and bears out our forecast of a month ago. All classes of living donors show an increase, and we are particularly gratified to see how the Sunday schools have responded to our Christmas appeal. The totals in several columns would have been even better than is shown had not the receipts from one district office for the last three days of the month been unavoidably delayed. As it is, these will help us out on the January account. Let us all thank God and take courage. The churches are waking up and the Apportionment Plan is bringing results: the Kingdom advances.

THE OLD SOUTH APPEAL

Pastors and missionary committees who issue a letter before the American Board collection will be interested in the way the Old South Church of Boston handles the matter. Its letter, just issued, is a model of comprehensiveness, conciseness, and effective setting forth of the work before a modern congregation. This letter is sent to the church people a week in advance. We are eager to learn the result of the letter, backed up as it is by much personal work on the part of the committee and by a sermon by the pastor, Dr. George A. Gordon. In some years this church has raised as much as $10,000 for the Board by means of its January offering. The letter follows:—

"The annual offering of the Old South Church and Society to the work of Foreign Missions under the American Board will be taken Sunday morning.

January 12, 1913.

"The record of the past year in the mission fields, whether it deals with political upheaval and war, or with quiet progress in ordinary channels of missionary labor, is full of encouragement to support and increase the work of the Board.

"Some of the significant facts in that record are as follows: -

"1. The confidence of Moslems in their religion has been greatly shaken by the issues of the war between the Balkan States and Turkey, and the approach of the Christian teacher is thus rendered more effective.

"2. Nearly six million people in Macedonia are free from Mohammedan rule, and two million Albanians who have been seeking Christian teachers for years are now free from Turkish opposition.

"3. The new constitution in China and President Yuan Shih Kai declare for religious liberty.

"4. The four hundred millions of China and the one hundred and ninety millions of Moslems are offering the Christian church an opportunity never before presented.

"5. The vast importance of the foreign mission as a factor in the World Movement for Peace becomes more obvious in the face of these facts. Sir Charles Warren, administrator of Natal, once remarked, 'One missionary in the field is worth a battalion of soldiers.' Our outposts ought to be strengthened everywhere. "Great as is the force and volume of the present work of the Board, with its 600 American missionaries and 5,000 native Christian workers, we must consider that an even distribution of these over the field would give more than 13,000 souls to each worker. Of ordained men giving themselves directly to evangelistic work, there would be five for each million of population. In all the mission fields there are great areas practically untouched by Christian efforts.

"The educational work of the Board, with its 77,000 students under Christian instruction, has a noble testimony to its value in the wide support it is receiving among the people themselves. The native contribution of the past year was $314,000 for the work, equaling the amount given to the Board by all the Congregational churches in our country and representing an increase of 12 per cent over last year, while our home churches gave 12 per cent less than last year. These native contributions came largely from countries oppressed by revolution, war, and poverty.

"It has been customary in Japan for each emperor to adopt some word as the motto of his reign. The new emperor has chosen for his motto, 'Righteousness.' The teachings of Christianity have accomplished much in Japan, and the outlook is most encouraging.

"Now we need to keep informed that our interest may be sustained; your Committee would recommend the *Mis*sionary Herald as an up-to-date magazine, full of carefully prepared, well-arranged intelligence.

"The Old South Church has been from the first the recognized leader of the Congregational churches in supporting the glorious enterprise of conquering the world for Christ. Her example encourages and inspires. May the new and unique opportunity presented today be improved. Henry H. Proctor, John L. Barry, Alpheus H. Hardy, Edward C. Streeter, Frederick Foster, Committee on Foreign Missions, Old South Church."

AMONG THE GIVERS

Harvard Church, Brookline, Rev. Ambrose W. Vernon, D.D., pastor, has accepted the Apportionment Plan, and applies $2,500 of the $3,300 assigned the American Board to the support of our general work in the city of Madura, India. This matter has been under careful consideration, first by the Missionary Committee and then by the church at large, for a number of months. A church meeting to consider the whole matter of apportionment, including various assignments, remained until eleven P.M. in earnest discussion over the problems and responsibilities which were raised. The balance, $800, the church has voted to apply to the Board's work at Chikore in Rhodesia, South Africa. We venture to say that this great church, with two such interesting and diverse fields to support, will not lack fuel to keep its missionary fires burning brightly for many years to come.

Pilgrim Church, Duluth, Minn., where Rev. Charles N. Thorp has recently assumed the pastorate, is experiencing a missionary awakening. We have received a very ingenious and effective program for a missionary meeting, in which the pastor took them on "An Airship Trip around the World," visiting some of the leading stations of the American Board. The information which was imparted to them at these stations is something amazing. The pastor must have been a diligent reader of the Missionary Herald and of the other publications of the Board for many years. We recommend this plan to others, and shall be glad to send a copy of Mr. Thorp's itinerary to the first church which applies.

There is an individual giver in Iowa who has a noteworthy record among us for liberality and constancy. Here is the record of his gifts for a series of years: 1904, $500; 1905, $600; 1906, $500; 1907, $500; 1909, $250; 1911, $1,000; 1912, $1,000; total, $4,350.

A friend in a country town in Massachusetts has sent us $15 the first of every month for five years. May he be long spared and greatly prospered!

A lady in New York State sends $100 from time to time for the regular work without allowing her name to be used. In her last letter, after speaking of some special needs mentioned in the Herald and wishing she could help on them, she says: "I have always made it a rule to give to the general fund, knowing that you people at headquarters know the needs best." She is a wise woman.

A business man in Boston, whose liberal contributions have been referred to from time to time in these columns, discovers now and then new and larger opportunities for usefulness. His last offer is to enable the Board to open a new station at Barsi in the Marathi Mission in Western India, where the Board has desired to place a missionary for a number of years. This friend agrees to purchase the necessary real estate and to pay the salary of the missionary. This will be an important forward step, as Barsi is the gateway to an immense territory in the Nizam dominions, the largest native state, where little missionary work has been done. The gift comes most appropriately in the year of the centenary of the Marathi Mission.

This same friend, not content with starting a new station in India, wishes to do the same for Africa, and agrees to pay the salary of the ordained man and the medical missionary for whom the Board is looking, hoping to reopen work at Beira on the East Coast.

We are particularly interested to receive from churches analyses of their collections for the Board. Almost uniformly they reveal that the bulk of the money is given by a comparatively small number in the congregation. A New England church sends us the following analysis of its recent offering: Dr. A., $200; Dr. S., $150; Mrs. D. and son, $150; one other individual, $50; the congregation, $94; total, $644.

It is such situations as this that have emphasized the need of the Every-Member canvass.

TURKEY

Relief Work at Salonica

That the distribution of relief to the multitude of sufferers by the war with the Balkan Allies is not haphazard and wasteful appears in Rev. W. C. Cooper's report of the way it was undertaken at Salonica when the inrushing Bulgarians and Greeks overwhelmed the Turkish population, driving them out from the mosques, where they had sought refuge, and looting them relentlessly. By the help of the Mohammedan priests officiating in the mosque, complete lists were obtained of responsible heads of the various families. Each head of the family was then given a ticket showing the number of members in his household (babies in arms not being counted). The lists thus collected aggregated at the time of writing about ten thousand souls and were constantly growing. For every four persons one loaf was given; each person thus had a quarter of a loaf of dry bread as a food supply for twentyfour hours. While the world in general does not love the Turk, Mr. Cooper urges that when he is defeated, disarmed, humbled, and starving, it is the duty of Christians to give him bread.

In the work of relief the missionaries co-operate with a committee, the honorary head of which is Queen Olga, of Greece, who came to Salonica with the king. The Greek pastor, the German pastor, the wife of the newly appointed Greek governor of the province, and the Catholic Sisters of Charity also take an active part. The committee was spending, at the time of writing, about $220 a day, $100 feeding over 4,000 people for twenty-four hours.

Money is needed, not only to keep alive the citizens of Salonica, but also to aid the Turkish population that was driven into the city by the Balkan Allies, like hares fleeing before a hunting party. It will take help to get them back to their villages, to provide them seed for sowing, oxen for plowing, and in some cases clothing and bedding.

A Plundered Village

Dr. House being on furlough, Rev. W. C. Cooper is in charge of the Thessalonica Agricultural and Industrial Institute. Some of the students reported that they had found the village of Asukla, about four miles from the school, deserted and partly burned, and that there was an unburied corpse there. Mr. Cooper determined to ride over and see for himself the situation. The following vivid picture is his account of what he found:—

"I took along one of our teachers who speaks Greek and Turkish, and a half hour in the saddle brought us to the place. It was a small village on the mountain side and had contained perhaps 125 houses. As we drew near we saw a few men moving about, who proved to be Greeks from near-by villages, some of them shepherds pasturing their flocks near, and others researching the débris to find if possible something to carry away. Starving dogs and cats were also prowling about, the dogs in their hunger still trying to guard the empty houses of their masters.

"We went first into the mosque, the most substantial building in the town, and found that it had been utterly looted. The gallery was partly burned, desk and lamps were shattered, torn rugs scattered in the mud outside, windows broken out and the door was torn down. We then rode about the deserted streets to see the burned houses. A house in such a village consists generally of one large room, with walls of bowlders and mud, and roof of poles and tiles. Thus when they were burned the four walls still stood and the tiles were fallen amid the ashes in the center. About half the houses were thus burned and also the sheepfolds. We entered a number of the houses which were left standing, and the sight was pitiful. The Turks in their flight had taken all they could, of course, and of what remained everything was stolen or destroyed. The floors were littered with rags from torn bedding or clothing, and with papers with writing or printing in Turkish; in many houses grain was found scattered about, where big earthen jars containing the villagers' scanty harvest had been emptied and the grain carried off. These jars, and several wooden chests standing empty in the middle of the floor, with covers up, were the only articles of value we saw in the town. The sum of all other articles which we saw would not sell for twenty-five cents; even the straw and the wood were carried away. Of domestic animals there remained not even a chicken, only the growling dogs and scurrying cats.

A Gruesome Sight

"We were about to give up the search for the body when a Turk and two big boys came along, and we asked them whether there was an unburied corpse in the place. They pointed to a whitewashed house with two stories, one of the two or three two-story houses in the village. We rode over and dismounted. The first floor was like all the other floors, littered with débris. The second floor also was bare save in one corner: and there was what we were looking for — a stagnant corpse of a man in Turkish dress, brown, broad trousers, sandaled feet, and the ragged remains of a peasant coat; the fez was lying at one side, and the head partly eaten by cats. Who shall give answer in the judgment for the shedding of this man's blood? We quickly left the horrible scene, but I fear it will live in memory forever.

"By this time we found that a number of Turks had returned to see in what condition their homes were, and among them the hojah (priest). He promised to give the body burial, and in answer to our questions said that Bulgarian soldiers came first and disarmed the population, after which the Greeks from the neighboring villages came and did the work of devastation. We rode home wondering what the Turk thinks of Christianity when he receives such treatment from the hands of 'Christians,' and whether there will still be some in America to say that since these people are 'Christians' we ought not to send missionaries among them. But we wondered most of all what these villagers and thousands of others in like condition are going to eat this winter. and how they can sow their fields in the spring."

After the Fighting

Rev. George D. Marsh, of Philippopolis, writes, under date of December 5, of the look of things in the lull of the fighting:—

"The work of devastation has gone on with lightning rapidity. Now the chief task for a good many of us will be to try to repair damages. This is one phase of the situation. The carnage has been appalling, the suffering immense and intense, the loss enormous. We will hope that the gain will be broad, real, and abiding. I think that all consider peace a virtually assured thing now.

"The doors of opportunity will be wide open for us. This station ought to be prepared to take up work at once in Adrianople, Kirk Killisse, and on to the Black Sea. From all I learn, it seems to me that Bulgaria will be in control at Salonica and Monastir, and not Greece or Servia. If that is so, I shall feel much easier in regard to the future of our work in those cities and regions. Our work is known and appreciated and honored by so many of the leaders in Bulgaria that I am confident it will be encouraged and not repressed. We are keeping up work as well as we can in our outstations. It is rather difficult when so many of the men are away in the army, especially the young men who are most active in leading the services. In two villages, at least, the Biblewomen are leading almost all of the church services. What if one incidental result of this war should be to show us how to supply our pulpits when the pastors are so scarce?"

Moslems Trekking

The Orient of November 27 contains this striking picture of a backward migration from the West to the East:—

"Constantinople is witnessing a strange sight in these days. The Turkish and other Mohammedan villagers from the Thracian plains are passing by the thousands through Stamboul, across the Bosporus, and off into Asia Minor. They are retracing the steps of their ancestors of five centuries ago, and leaving Europe to return to Asia.

"And the weird part of it is that in costume, conveyances, and manner of life there has been practically no change in these five hundred years. The wheels of their long, narrow carts have spokes in them now where they used to be solid wheels, and perhaps the rush matting that protects the family from the weather may be a little better woven. But the oxen or buffaloes that leisurely drag the household along, the barefooted wife or the sandaled husband with the goad, who pulls these lumbering animals by a string, and the primitive mode of life on their plodding journey, all belong to a bygone age. Apparently the five centuries of life on European soil have not affected to any perceptible degree their scale in civilization. These Asiatics have been in Europe, but not of it; and now, with the descent of the Bulgarian hordes upon the region, they pick up all their earthly belongings, save their stone or adobe huts, and trek back to the regions of Anatolia.

"According to their own admission, they are not migrating for fear of the Bulgarian troops. It is not because the advancing armies have burned their villages, for they have not; these refugees testify that whatever burning has occurred has been by the retreating forces. But they are leaving the farms and villages of Thrace for the same reason that some of these very same individuals left their Bosnian homes three or four years ago - because of a deep-seated aversion to living under any but Moslem rule. Call it prejudice, call it obstinacy, call it religious bigotry, call it what you may, the result is a preference for Mohammedan surroundings and government, with all the privations of a long, weary migration and an unknown future, rather than the comfort of their ancestral homes under foreign rule, especially the rule of those who were once their rayah - their flocks and herds.

"The British embassy has made a careful estimate of the number of these poor folk, half-blinded by the too brilliant light of civilization, who are passing through this city to escape it, and the number already reaches the astounding total of 107,000, with the probability that from 75,000 to 100,000 more will follow. Of these, a small proportion have arrived here sans carts, sans cattle, sans implements, sans everything; and these the municipal government is preparing to shelter and care for through the winter. The rest are being conveyed by ferryboat, carts and all, over to the Asia side, to wander on wherever kismet will take them. Neither they nor the civil authorities seem to have any definite idea whither they are to go nor how they are to make a new start in life. We are glad to announce that Lady Lowther and her helpers are seriously considering using some relief funds in assisting these unfortunate victims of misdirected nationalism to exist through the coming winter. Many are receiving much needed clothing as they pass through the city. Disease has claimed many victims on the great trek; but so hardy is the stock and so inured to privations, that most will doubtless survive and manage somehow to start life anew."

Relief Work from Constantinople

W. W. Peet, treasurer of the Turkish missions, writes from Constantinople, December 14, concerning the extensive relief work undertaken in that city, the ministering of which has been largely in his hands: -

"We have received, in response to telegrams from here, a number of which were signed by Mr. Rockhill, up to the present time about $30,000. We need fully $100,000 more.

"Our first work lay in the line of emergency hospitals. In this work we had the very efficient help of Major Ford, of the United States Army, who happened to be here on furlough. The doctors at Konia, Sivas, and Aintab telegraphed me their willingness to come and assist. Dr. Dodd, his wife, Miss Cushman, and a native nurse were asked to come, and have been in Constantinople for a number of weeks. Since the cessation of hostilities this work, of course, has considerably slackened, and Dr. Dodd has now returned to Konia.

"In addition to the above, mainly under the leadership of Mrs. Rockhill. who has worked most admirably throughout this period of stress, a cholera camp was instituted at San Stefano. to take the stream of sick soldiers who were coming from the front. A most magnificent work was done at that point under the leadership of Mr. Philip. first secretary of the American embassy. In this hospital work in the city we worked with the Turkish Red Crescent and through any channel where our services and means could best be used to advantage.

"The great problem now confronting us is the crowd of refugees who have been trekking through Constantinople on their way to Asia Minor. It is said that fully 120,000 refugees, practically all of them Moslems, have fled from Asia Minor, and at least 70,000 or 80,000 more will follow.

"At the request of the Red Cross Society, I have sent out letters in all directions, and these letters bring to light the fact that by far the larger part of these refugees have settled in the vicinity of Brousa and Eskishehr, some going on as far as Konia, but all of them in the western end of Asia Minor. At the last meeting of our chapter I suggested a plan to the committee for caring for these people, recommending the acceptance of an offer made by Dr. Post to assist us, and suggesting the appointment of Dr. Post as our field superintendent, to go over the region where refugees are to be found, to locate them, to get into touch with the government, and to form such committees as may be necessary to prosecute the work. We have already organized committees in Brousa and in Konia. We are also rendering assistance to a committee already formed in Salonica, where fully 20,000 refugees are now under the care of a local committee.

"I cannot close this letter without speaking of the magnificent work done by Mrs. Rockhill and the always cordial influence and help given by Mr. Rockhill in this enterprise. The necessities of the work which we have carried on together have brought us into closer contact and done much towards cultivating a friendship that possibly might not otherwise have been realized."

The Ericksons' Exit from Elbasan

Writing from Lausanne, Switzerland, December 23, Rev. C. Telford Erickson describes the expulsion of himself and family from the Board's station at Elbasan, thus continuing the story told in the article in this number, entitled "Driving out a Missionary":—

"Now that we are safely arrived here I will recount to you some of the experiences by the way. After my release in Durazzo, I returned home to find that Mrs. Erickson had had no news whatever covering the last sad weeks. I remained at home Sunday, going Monday to the commander (Serb) to tell him of my arrival. He detained me for nearly two hours, then sent me home with orders to speak to no one nor leave the house once I had entered it. Upon arrival I found he had sent a guard of soldiers to enforce the order. These took possession of our vard and outside kitchen, and kept me virtually a prisoner. Mr. Tsilka they had imprisoned, and would not allow me to see him or talk with him about the work. I asked permission to remain a week to arrange my affairs. The commander replied: 'Your private or personal affairs are nothing to me. I will give you tomorrow to prepare, and the next day you must leave.'

"Our house was all in confusion, as we had just moved in; the library was for the most part piled on the floor. In one day we could do no more than get ready, so we left things as they were, packed the clothing, secured our horses, and prepared for the journey. We wished to start early, so as to make the steamer for Trieste; but they made it impossible by appearing on the scene with a paper from the commander saying my correspondence was confiscated, and they spent a couple of hours searching through books, papers, and finally our baggage, which was in the yard ready to be loaded. They collected a basketful of letters, private journals, etc., dismissed the horses I had, and went away. Late that evening they brought them back and said we could leave the next morning.

A Hard Journey Made Harder

"In the meantime the horses we had secured were gone, as the owners were afraid of their being confiscated like hundreds of others, and we had to put up with horses that were so poor and weak the army wouldn't have them

A VILLAGE BARBER OF TURKEY

even for pack horses. On these we prepared to leave; about 10 A.M. the order came, and we started with soldiers guarding us on both sides lest we speak to the people in passing. In the middle of the city there was a halt of nearly an hour for no apparent reason unless to exhibit us. When we did get away it was so late we could only make a khan five hours out, where we passed the night. The journey had its usual measure of hardship, with quagmires, bogs, and lakes of muddy water, steep river banks and bridgeless rivers, hard, dirty floors for beds, and meager fare; but we arrived in Durazzo the third day, Friday, and Sunday, the 15th, we took the steamer for Brindisi.

"In spite of the restrictions put on me, through Mrs. Erickson, my kavass, and the friends I saw before I went to the governor, I learned that there was much suffering among Albanian refugees, thousands having fled from their homes, taking nothing with them. The Servians are eating up the land like locusts, and so far as I can learn are paving little or nothing for grain, hav, bread, sheep, oxen, and horses. Under the circumstances, it does seem a pity that I am not doing something to relieve this distress. I have had a promise of some help from the Red Cross at Geneva, but they had proceeded so far in their work, mapping out all they could possibly do, that much cannot be expected. I believe, however, that in England, through Mr. Gentle Cackett, Sir Albert Spicer, and some others to whom I have access, I could get substantial help, and I ask your consent to do this."

A Changing Temper

A native preacher who recently visited Shivilgi, one of the districts of Marash, reported a conversation with Markar Agha, the headman of the village, which is worth repeating as an indication of a changed attitude on the part of many in the land toward those whom they at first distrusted. Forty years ago, when the gospel was first brought to Shivilgi, this man beat the preacher and drove him out of the place. Now, in his one hundred and twelfth year, he deeply regrets that act and prays that he may be forgiven.

Quickening the Pace at Foochow

Rev. Lewis Hodous, of Foochow City, writes of many signs of enlarging missionary work in the new times. The mission's book room on the main street is crowded every night. Recently he had the pleasure of addressing three hundred men, as many as could crowd in. The Union Theological School, in which Methodists, the Church of England, and the American Board are joined, is now in working order, having nine regular teachers and sixty students (think of sixty educated Chinese in training for the Christian ministry among their people!), and many more expected next year. A fine new hospital is soon to be dedicated. Plans are being perfected for a union university, and ground is about to be broken for the union kindergarten training school. On the docket is the building of at least five churches. This year, the first of the republic, will be a red-letter year as far as accessions to the churches are concerned; one of the number has already doubled its membership in the past six months.

President Beard Sees New Foochow

Rev. W. L. Beard, who last autumn left the secretaryship of the American Board's Middle District to return to China as president of Foochow College, has arrived at his post. "It's good to be back where you can feel things move," he writes, which, in view of the fact that his last three years have been spent in New York City, indicates the pace of China today. He notes with pleasure several signs of the passing to Chinese pastors and other leaders of more authority and responsibility. The term by which the missionary has been designated (religious teacher or manager) is now changed to that by which the pastors are known (shepherd or pastor). The name of the church in Foochow on some of the printed matter has been changed from the "American Board Church" (or Society) to the

OPERATING ROOM AT FOOCHOW HOSPITAL AFTER THE BATTLE

"Congregational Church." The Chinese also are taking much interest in the adoption of a polity by which the Congregational churches of the region are to be organized, which polity gives to the missionary a vote equal in weight to that of a Chinese pastor, all sign of autocracy being removed.

Dr. Kinnear Honored

Dr. H. N. Kinnear, head of the mission hospital at Foochow, was recently honored with a decoration from the government, for services rendered at the time of the revolution. He speaks modestly of it; says the medal has not yet been delivered, but that the certificate given him indicates the bestowal of the third order "of something or other," and shows that General Sun has not forgotten the work done after the fight in which the city was taken by the revolutionaries.

As significant a recognition, in a way, was made at the time of the Foochow celebration of the commencement of the fight for freedom from the Manchu yoke. Mingling with the crowd which filled the streets to watch the procession, Dr. Kinnear happened to be standing opposite a shop where a number of people were likewise observing the parade, when some of them came over and brought a bench for the missionary party, later bringing them tea and cakes and showing most cordial good will. At length came the explanation, that they had brought a son of the family to the hospital the year before, where he had been healed of some sort of sore on his thigh, for which they felt greatly indebted and offered these attentions.

Within One Lifetime

An important event in the Foochow Mission of late was the death of Pastor Ding, the first Congregational pastor of the mission. His life spanned a great change in China and great progress in mission work. When he made his first trip to Shaowu with some of the earlier missionaries he got separated from them, and they supposed him to have been killed, only to have him report just in time to take the boat back. Several times he was exposed to danger on account of his preaching.

Helping the Tartars

An interesting bit of news from Foochow is, that realizing the straits into which the Manchus have been driven by the course of events. Dr. Kinnear devised a way to provide them with work by which they could earn something more than their food. In response to the suggestion, one Monday morning a gang of Tartar men appeared, ready to work at the grading going on about the new hospital premises. Unaccustomed to hard work, they proved awkward and slow, but had kept at it for three days, showing their willingness to learn, and earning the low wages that were given them. Dr. Kinnear reports it as the first step in the proper evolution of these people, who have never known what it means to earn wages and to be independent.

Two of the Tartars wounded in the fight a year ago have been taken on as hospital watchman and coolie. While it would not have been good policy to have used so many Tartars last year, the antipathy toward them has so passed that the Chinese themselves say that the action ought now to produce no ill feeling.

Anti-Foot-binding Crusade in Shaowu

A letter from Mrs. E. D. Kellogg, of the Shaowu station in the hill country of Foochow province, shows the part that Christian Chinese women are taking in advancing one of the reforms to which the new China is committed:—

"The new magistrate is very anxious to introduce reforms as rapidly as possible, and for that purpose he has officially appointed a number of women chiefly Christian women — to go out and urge the women to unbind their feet. Last Saturday I was asked by Mrs. Pastor Diong, who was appointed by the magistrate as the head of this little band of women, to attend one of these house to house meetings. When I arrived the meeting was well under way. and the speaker was addressing the audience at the top of her voice and speaking very rapidly. Consequently I missed a good deal that was said, for my ears are still very slow to hear. But I will tell you some of the things that she said: 'Small bound feet you think are beautiful. They are not beautiful. They are ugly, very ugly. When a woman has bound feet she cannot work well, and doesn't make a good wife. It is like a beautiful tree with leaves and fruit and flowers. You gather the fruit and flowers and think the tree is beautiful. But if the roots are cut off the tree will slowly become useless and die. Now Siensen Niong's feet,' pointing as she spoke to my feet, 'her feet are good to look at. She comes from America, and in America none of the women bind their feet. They all have big feet. The condition of Chinese women is very pitiful. We women have our own homes and children, but we are glad to go out and try to get you women to unbind vour feet.'

"After her Mrs. Diong spoke and told them that I had a little daughter, and that she would be able to go to school and to worship and to be strong and well. This would be very different from a little girl whose mother bound her feet and ate opium and kept the little girl at home where she could not learn to study or pray. After this the meeting ended, and the women gave thanks for the little talk."

Educating China's Women

Miss Luella Miner, principal of the North China Union College for Women, at Peking, was recently invited to speak at the opening of a new girls' school under the patronage of the wife of a major general. She writes of the event as follows:—

"The school is situated on Twelfth Street in the 'Flower Garden' of a former official of the first rank, not far from the Cabinet Building - a beautiful place, with many courts and picturesque nooks. About a hundred girls are registered to attend. We met many interesting men and women, several of the men having positions in the government or in the president's secretariat. When I found what a function it was, I was glad that I had refused to make a formal speech and that my few feeble remarks were at the very end of the program, which began with the premier. He did not make a very long speech and he slipped out long before they got down to me. General Tuan, the head of the president's body guard, the acting president of the government university, Ma Liang, the vice-president of the Board of Education, and several others made speeches. I was glad to note the sensible, conservative tone in regard to the position of women. One of the teachers of the school, Miss Wu, from Central China, gave a fine setting forth of the ideals of the school, mentioning love as a fundamental virtue, and referring to the kindness of Jesus to all classes of society. The time has passed when the Christian church in China is despised for working for the poor and ignorant."

Christian Influence in the New China

Writing of the reception given to Dr. Sun Yat Sen by the Christians in Peking last September, Rev. A. B. DeHaan, of Pangchwang, emphasizes the significance of the affair from the Christian standpoint:—

"To have the nation's ideal, the nation's hero, as guest of the church in the capital of the republic means that men of every class are going to look with greater respect upon an organization and a religion which can receive such recognition from the nation's foremost man. No other religion or sect has offered to invite him as their guest. It shows the virility of Christianity and the interest taken in public matters by the Christian church. So one thinks that the day of despising our cause is gradually passing. A religion which today has liberty for its propagation and which numbers among its followers many of the leading men of the nation is bound to grow in the esteem of the common people. The overthrow of the Manchus resulted in the establishment of a republic. Yes, more than that, it is to result in the coming of the larger civilization of men which draws no national boundaries and which is controlled by good will. Jesus called it the Kingdom of God."

The American Missionary Association in China

The reference made to Dr. Fong F. Sec, of China, in the December Missionary Herald called out from Rev. George W. Hinman, formerly American Board missionary of Foochow, but now the American Missionary Association's field secretary for the Pacific coast, the information that Dr. Sec was one of the products of the American Missionary Association's work. Twenty-five years ago he was a boy in its night school at Sacramento, Cal., where he began to learn English. He was brought to faith in Christ through the teaching of Mr. Chin Toy, successor of Jee Gam in the San Francisco Chinese church. A loval worker in the Berkeley Chinese Mission sent Fong Sec to school, then to Pomona College, whence, after some postgraduate work in the University of California, he went to Columbia. He is now on the editorial staff of the Commercial Press at Shanghai, translating the new government school text-books, which are being sold by the hundred thousand, and which had large influence in creating the New China. He stands thus not only as representative of those in China who have been "turning the world upside down," but "as one of the hundreds and even thousands of men who, having learned Christianity and democracy on the Pacific coast, have gone back to scatter their ideas broadcast in the soil they know how to cultivate better than Americans."

The Wonderful Wall of China

A summer's day trip from Peitaiho to the Great Wall of China, about twenty-five miles away, impressed Mr. DeHaan with the magnificence of that revelation of China's enterprise:—

"One stands amazed at the very audacity of the plan, namely, to build a high brick and stone wall along the whole northern border of the country, extending for hundreds and hundreds of miles, yes, into the thousands. The Chinese call it the 3,333 mile wall. It is built over mountain and valley regardless of the stupendous difficulties involved. The monarch who built the wall so as to protect the nation from the Tartar invaders on the north can be compared to the Pharaoh of Egypt who built the pyramids, although the latter, perhaps, are less of a wonder than this wall. Millions of Chinese built their lives into this wall. All natural formations were used where possible, so that the actual wall completes what nature tried to do when it threw up these mighty mountain ranges during past geological times. This wall is perhaps twice as wide at the base as at the top, and the top is broad enough for a four-horse team and wagon to drive upon and still have room to spare. Its height varies according to the location. I saw places where it must have been almost fifty feet high and mostly built out of solid stone facing filled in with dirt. The bricks used are large, often weighing fifty pounds. The lime used is remarkable, for in many places it has stood the wear and tear of the climate better than the brick and stone. This wall was first built in the third century before Christ, which would make it at least 2,100 years old. It has been repaired since then in places. It will always occupy a place as one of the wonders of the world."

INDIA

A Great Christian Endeavor Convention

It was held at Madura, South India, November 14-17. Rev. J. J. Banninga, of Tirumangalam, who had much to do with the arrangements therefor, writes of it thus:—

"Christian Endeavor is not new in India, having been organized here early in the eighties; and it has flourished ever since. Madura took a lead in the work from the very beginning and now has the strongest district union in all India. There are more than 300 societies and over 9,000 members in this mission. When the South India Committee decided to hold a convention for the Tamil country this year, they could think of no better place than Madura, which has always been recognized as the capital of the Tamil country.

"That the convention was a success there can be no doubt. More than 250 delegates came from other districts than Madura, and fully 750 came from places outside of Madura town. While the largest meeting numbered not less than 2.300, there were several in which the attendance numbered from 1,200 to 1,600. We call such meetings large in India, where the Christian population of a place is such a small proportion of the whole. There are in Madura and the immediately surrounding villages not more than 2,000 adult Christians. Thus you can see that a large proportion of them must have been present.

"The meetings themselves were of a high order. It need hardly be stated that this was so when one knows that among the speakers were Dr. R. F. Horton, of London, and Dr. Stanley White, secretary of the Presbyterian

AN INDIAN CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

This picture was taken in West India, at Sholapur in the Marathi Mission, the delegates being gathered outside the mission residence

Board of Foreign Missions at New York. There were also many missionaries and Indian leaders present, who gave us of their best, and we are certain that no one went away empty if he had a desire to be filled.

Pilgrim's Progress to Music

"There were several features that attracted attention, though they may not have been more important than others. Among these we must mention first the great concert arranged by Mr. Jeffery and others of the Madura Mission, in which the story of Pilgrim's Progress was told in song by singers in costume. The songs were written by Indian Christians of this district and sung by choruses and individuals connected with the schools of the mission. The whole was most creditably done and great praise is due all who took part in it. Those that heard it will never forget the closing scene, where Christian, ready to sink in the river of Despair, is told by his companion of the band of Shining Ones that he sees standing on the other shore, and of the final chorus that these sing as they approach with waving palm leaves. As they stood on the platform the front row was composed of young women dressed in white. As they sang and waved their palm leaves we could well imagine that we saw an angel chorus from the skies. It certainly thrilled the whole audience, and missionaries of long residence in India said they had never seen its equal in this country. The libretto is to be published and we doubt not that the concert will be repeated in many a place throughout the Tamil country.

The Procession

"Another attractive feature of the convention was the procession. This started from the convention hall after one of the afternoon meetings and marched through some of the principal streets of the town. I do not think that it is too much to say 'that the whole town was moved, and they asked, Who is this?' About 1,200 were in line, and as they marched they sang. People crowded into the streets to see what was up, and they were told that this was a part of the army of the Lord. In the line of march there was a bullock cart on which had been built a representation of a lifeboat. It was manned by Juniors from Pasumalai. A Madras paper, in printing the report of its Hindu reporter, said the boat represented Noah's Ark. There was also another little bullock cart belonging to one of the India pastors. On each side of the bullock was a large Christian Endeavor monogram. These certainly would have attracted attention at home. The girls of the Mangalapuram school made a fine picture as they marched four abreast. They carried long chains of green leaves interspersed with bright flowers, and were the finest part of the procession."

The Native Arm

The accompanying picture is a forcible reminder of how missionary influence is reduplicated and extended in the working of a mission station. For it shows the helpers of one station, Aruppukottai, at their annual examination on the veranda of the mission residence. Mr. Jeffery speaks of it as a university extension course, calculated to keep them up to par. Earnest and fine faces they are, so far as they are visible; note the gray-haired woman in the right foreground. Evidently they are doing their best. It is fine to think of what they carry into the life of the Indian community thereabout.

Union in Theology

It often seems that theology is the hardest field of all for church union. Men can unite in action when they cannot in thought. They come together on the field of service; they separate when they reflect on their faith. Here also the foreign missionary enterprise is pointing the way; it has united missions of different denominations in maintaining theological schools. It has done this in Africa and China and India. In South India, where appear the largest and most hopeful union efforts of the Indian Church, a fine demonstration of real unity is being made by the establishment of a Union Theological Seminary at Bangalore, maintained by five missions: two Presbyterian, the United Free Church of Scotland and the Reformed Presbyterian Church of America: two Congregational, the London Missionary Society and the American Board: and the Wesleyan Missionary

A CHRISTIAN WORKERS' EXAMINATION IN SOUTH INDIA

Society. The Dnyanodaya reports the laying of the corner stones in November of the new buildings: a hostel, the main block with lecture hall, class rooms, library, and chapel, the principal's house and a professor's residence, the cost of which, including site, was over a lakh of rupees. Rev. Dr. Horton, of London, and Dr. John R. Mott participated in the exercises.

THE PORTFOLIO

The Gospels and the Apportionment Plan

They have lively annual meetings at the Tabernacle Church, Salem, of which Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, D.D., is the honored pastor, if we may judge from one report which has come to our notice, that of the Woman's Missionary Society, presented by Miss Emma H. Short, secretary, from which the following is an extract.— THE EDITOR.

The Apportionment Plan has been conspicuously before us this year, both as an auxiliary and as a branch.

The woman in the temple corridor putting all her living into the temple chest did not need the inspiration of the apportionment plan, and Jesus did not bring it before her. Jesus Christ just looked on and approved.

But when the young millionaire came to Jesus, Jesus applied to him the apportionment plan. And Jesus did it with an authority not vested in any finance committee of our Congregational boards today. Jesus' method of testing to see whether the young man's business methods needed investigation was a very simple one. Jesus found out whether the young man's money had been made on the basis of the second table of the Decalogue. The young man came right up fearlessly to the Ten Commandment test: "Master, all these have I observed from my youth." A man that makes his millions and keeps the Ten Commandments at the same time has a right to every dollar that he possesses, and he is a credit to Palestine or New York or Chicago. Jesus looking on this Palestine millionaire loved him. Of course Jesus would love him: and Jesus is just as ready to love any American millionaire today - on the same basis.

Then Jesus made the apportionment, "Go, sell whatsoever thou hast and give to the poor; and come follow me." And Jesus told him what his dividends would be—grander dividends than Wall Street ever dreamed of—"Thou shalt have treasure in heaven." The young man had handled stocks extensively enough to feel intuitively that he might be missing the chance of a lifetime not to make sure of the tremendous returns of these foreign investments. He went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions.

The Gospels tell us of another interview between Jesus and a rich business man. Zacchæus had not kept the Ten Commandments, and he knew that he had not; but when he saw his chance to be saved, he determined to hold on to that chance, cost him what it would; and he did hold on, and he told Jesus what it was going to cost him, and that he was ready. He stood up manfully and told Jesus that he was going to sterilize that bank account of his. The Mosaic law had provided for just such financial sterilization. The divine response of Jesus was a swift one: "Today is salvation come to this house." Jesus is just as ready to save a rich sinner as a poor one, and here was a rich sinner just as ready to be saved as a poor one.

It did not take Zacchæus long to explain to his bookkeeper the overturn in the office. The bookkeeper had to get a copy of the Ten Commandments and of the Mosaic law of restitution, and hang them right up over his rolltop desk. Then Zacchæus explained to his bookkeeper the apportionment plan, and told him to find out the church treasurers, and to pay over to them one-half of his property at once, out and out.

Just as quickly as the banks opened the next morning Zacchæus's office clerks were seen flying with checks in every direction. The minute that Zacchæus became a Christian, his salvation meant money at interest to his church and to all seven of the Congregational Benevolent Societies. "Today is salvation come to this house." Jesus Christ then has established a vital connection between the salvation of the soul and the money market value of his kingdom on earth and here in America today.

Arthur T. Pierson. A Biography by His Son, Delavan Leonard Pierson. New York: Fleming H. Revell Co. Illustrated. Pp. 333. Price, $1.50 net.

An intimate picture of a zealous and gifted servant of God by one who had not only the first-hand knowledge of a son, but who also for the last twenty years was his father's companion and co-worker in editing the Missionary Review of the World. "A Spiritual Warrior, Mighty in the Scriptures; a Leader in the Modern Missionary Crusade" is the sub-title of the book, and the life story, told with frankness and much detail, reveals the figure of an intense, single-eyed, devoted advocate, both in the earlier years of pastoral service and in the later period of missionary propaganda. The more personal and lovable side of the man's private life, his family relationships, and his religious experience are also brought out in this son's tribute to his father's power and charm.

Children of Borneo. By Edwin H. Gomes, M.A. New York: Fleming H. Revell Co. With eight colored illustrations. Pp. 93. Price, 60 cents net.

A remote and queer people—the Dyaks of Borneo—are here described, with their curious customs and beliefs, in language that boys and girls can easily follow. The pictures are very gay and striking; a short chapter at the close adds the missionary touch to a story strange enough to provoke the interest of a healthy American boy.

Sun Yat Sen: or The Awakening of China. By James Cantlie, M.A., M.D., F.R.C.S., Dean of the College of Medicine, Hongkong, and C. Sheridan Jones. New York: Fleming H. Revell Co. Illustrated. 12mo. Cloth, $1.25 net.

To some interesting, well-written chapters by Mr. Jones, Dr. Cantlie has added his own intimate knowledge of the character and work of the "Washington of China." No one could write more informally or appreciatively. For twenty-five years Dr. Cantlie has been the closest of friends to Dr. Sun, both at the Hongkong College of Medicine and at the author's home in London. The narrative is therefore of value as one of intimate appreciation. Its inspiration comes from an enthusiastic yet restrained portrayal of the man who gained and held the confidence of so many millions of his fellow Chinese by his "convincing honesty and unselfish patriotism, simplicity of character, and readiness to endure all for his country's sake"; and who was able to unite all classes, guilds, and sections in a victorious combination against the intrenched Manchu, thus overthrowing an empire "more alien to that of his forefathers than the republic he himself established,"... "restoring China to her true, her normal self." The book is most readable.

Dr. Cantlie asserts, by the way, that Dr. Sun was born in China, in the province of Kwangtung, in a remote village some thirty miles south of Hongkong. His father was a Christian convert, employed as a missionary agent by the London Missionary Society. E. F. B.

Papuan Pictures. By H. M. Dauncey. London: London Missionary Society. With 63 illustrations from photographs by the author. Pp. 184. Price, 2 shillings.

After seventeen years of adventures among the people of whom he writes, the author relates his experiences of one and another sort in a familiar and straightforward style, with young people particularly in mind. Here again the make-up of the book is gay and attractive; open it where you will it catches attention.
